

Coalition for Networked Information

To: Loudon County Chamber of Commerce
From: Diane Goldenberg-Hart, Communications Coordinator, Coalition for Networked Information

To Whom it May Concern,

I am writing this letter in support of the nomination of Design for Future for a Loudoun County Chamber of Commerce Small Business Award. As the communications coordinator for the Coalition for Networked Information (CNI - a nonprofit organization promoting the use of networked information technology in research and education), I have had the pleasure of working very closely with Sayeh (Sally) Behnam, president of Design for Future, on numerous projects since 2005, when we first contracted with her company to design and produce CNI's program plan and meeting book covers.

From our initial exchange, I have found Ms. Behnam and her staff to be thoroughly professional and committed to the highest standards of quality and customer satisfaction. Design for Future has consistently taken the necessary time and effort (always with great patience!) to learn as much as possible about our organization and our projects, and then continue to make adjustments and changes to the product until we were completely satisfied. In addition to Design for Future's outstanding work and remarkable flexibility at filling the needs of its clients, the company offers a discount to non-profit organizations, so we receive top-notch design quality and service at a price that is reasonable for our budget.

I would recommend Design for Future to anyone in need of design services because of the company's excellent work and customer service; for these reasons, Design for Future is deserving of special recognition from the Loudon County business community.

Sincerely,
Diane Goldenberg-Hart
